Test Script:	1. Select a book and open the book info page for it
	2. Select the Want to Read button and click ○ Observe that the button changes to grey and says "Want to Read" with a checkmark
	3. Return to the homeage and select another book
	4. On the book page select Already Read from the Want to Read button
	5. Use the My Books menu and select My Reading Log ○ Observe that the books you selected show up under the correct reading log lists
	6. Select a book and click Read
	   ○ This will load and open the book
	7. Click through a couple pages and return to the homepage
	8. Return to the Reading Log page and check that the book you are currently reading shows up on the Currently Reading list

	9. Return to the homepage
	10. Select a book and open the book page
	11. Use the Want to Read menu and select Create New List
	      o This will open up a popup page called "Create a new list"
	12. Complete the list details and click cancel
	13. Repeat the process, complete the details, and select the Create New List button
	14. Repeat this process, selecting a couple more books to add to the list you just created
	15. Select a couple books and create a second list
	16. Use the My Books menu to go to the My Lists page
	17. Ensure that the lists and books show up correctly
	18. Select a list, open it, and use the Edit link to update the name/details
	19. Select a list, open it, and check that you can delete an item from the list
	20. Return to the My Lists page and delete your lists
	      o This should clear the lists from your My Lists page, but your recent activity should still show up

Test Postconditions:	The user should be able to manage all functions relating to tracking books they want to read, books they are currently reading, books they have read, reviewing books, and creating reading lists.

Description

This test checks the functionality of the different list areas a user can create and access including the Reading Log and the My Lists functions.
